Pregnant and don’t know what to do?

A guide to your options
Are you pregnant but not sure you want to have the baby?

Do you need more information about the options available to you?

This leaflet will tell you about the options you have, and where to go for help.

Make sure

Am I definitely pregnant?

If you think you could be pregnant you should do a pregnancy test as soon as possible. You can do a pregnancy test from the first day of a missed period. If you do a test before this time the level of pregnancy hormone, human chorionic gonadotrophin (hCG), may be too low to show up on the test and you may get a negative result even though you are pregnant.

If you don’t know when your next period is due, the earliest time to do a test is three weeks (21 days) after unprotected sex.

You can buy a pregnancy test to do yourself, or you can ask for a test to be done at:

• your general practice
• a contraception (family planning) or sexual health service
• a young people's service (there will be an upper age limit)
• a pharmacy (there may be a charge)
• most NHS walk-in centres (England only). There may be a charge and an upper age limit
• some genitourinary medicine (GUM) clinics.

For details on how to find one of these services see How do I find out about services? on page 15.

The test is positive – what do I do now?

If the pregnancy test is positive, this means you are pregnant. All tests, including tests you do yourself, are very reliable.

It’s normal to feel a range of different emotions when you find out you are pregnant. You may feel some, all or none of the following:

Make sure

Am I definitely pregnant?

If you think you could be pregnant you should do a pregnancy test as soon as possible. You can do a pregnancy test from the first day of a missed period. If you do a test before this time the level of pregnancy hormone, human chorionic gonadotrophin (hCG), may be too low to show up on the test and you may get a negative result even though you are pregnant.

If you don’t know when your next period is due, the earliest time to do a test is three weeks (21 days) after unprotected sex.

You can buy a pregnancy test to do yourself, or you can ask for a test to be done at:

• your general practice
• a contraception (family planning) or sexual health service
• a young people's service (there will be an upper age limit)
• a pharmacy (there may be a charge)
• most NHS walk-in centres (England only). There may be a charge and an upper age limit
• some genitourinary medicine (GUM) clinics.

For details on how to find one of these services see How do I find out about services? on page 15.

The test is positive – what do I do now?

If the pregnancy test is positive, this means you are pregnant. All tests, including tests you do yourself, are very reliable.

It’s normal to feel a range of different emotions when you find out you are pregnant. You may feel some, all or none of the following:
• happiness that you are able to get pregnant
• shock that you are actually pregnant
• worry that you aren’t ready, or can’t afford, to have a baby
• anger that you are pregnant when you didn’t choose to be
• anxiety about what other people will think
• excitement about such a big change in your life
• concern that you might make the wrong decision
• fear about the process of pregnancy and childbirth.

When do I have to make a decision about what to do?

Whatever you feel, you now need to think about what to do. It is important to take time to make the decision that’s right for you, but it’s also important not to delay making your decision.

Don’t let anyone else pressure you into doing something you don’t want to do. The decision is yours. For some women it can be very difficult working out what to do, but there is support available to help you think through all your options.

You can choose to:
• continue with the pregnancy and keep the baby
• end the pregnancy by having an abortion
• continue with the pregnancy and have the baby adopted.

How can I make up my mind?

Talking to people you trust, and getting accurate information about all your options, can help you make up your mind.

You may want to talk to your partner, family or friends, or you may feel more comfortable speaking to someone who isn’t so close to you. The following services can talk confidentially with you, free of charge, about how you feel about the pregnancy and what options you have:
• your general practice (talk to your GP or nurse)
• a contraception or sexual health service
• a young people’s service (these will have an upper age limit)
• fpa (Helpline: 0845 122 8690).

Northern Ireland

If you are faced with an unplanned pregnancy and you live in Northern Ireland, fpa in Northern Ireland (Tel: 028 90 325 488) can offer:
• pregnancy testing
• non-judgmental and non-directive counselling
• information on all your options to help you decide what to do.

Wherever you live, for a fee, you can discuss your options with organisations such as Marie Stopes (Helpline: 0845 300 8090. www.mariestopes.org.uk) and bpas (Helpline: 08457 304 030. www.bpas.org.uk). There is useful information on their websites which can help you explore your feelings, including how you feel about having a baby or having an abortion.

Young people under 25 can get support, information and advice about all options, including abortion, from the Brook helpline on 0800 0185 023.

It is essential that you are given accurate information and time to explore how you feel, so that you can make the decision that is right for you. Be aware that some other organisations offer pregnancy counselling but believe that abortion is morally wrong, and will counsel you against abortion.
Continuing with the pregnancy

This section tells you about where to go for help and advice if you decide you want to continue with the pregnancy.

What should I do now?

If you decide to continue with the pregnancy you need to start your antenatal care (care during pregnancy), whether you are planning to keep the baby or to have it adopted. To start your antenatal care you can visit your general practice, or register with one. Or you may be able to go directly to a midwife at your nearest maternity unit. To find your nearest maternity unit see www.birthchoiceuk.com or call NHS Direct (see page 15).

As part of your antenatal care, the doctor or midwife can talk to you about:
• healthy eating and exercise
• taking folic acid
• stopping smoking
• cutting out, or down on, alcohol
• stopping recreational drug use
• whether any medicines you are taking are unsafe during pregnancy
• getting advice and tests for sexually transmitted infections.

If you have a medical condition, such as epilepsy or diabetes, talk to your doctor or midwife as soon as possible because you may need special care. If you are taking medication, it is important that you continue to take this and seek advice from a doctor or nurse as soon as possible.

Some things to think about

When you’re making your decision, it may be helpful to consider the following things:

• Your life now. What is most important to you in your life at the moment? This might involve many things, such as family, friends, work and education.

• Your future. What are your hopes and aims for the future? You can think about all aspects of your life.

How would these things be affected if you decide to:
• continue with the pregnancy and keep the baby
• end the pregnancy by having an abortion
• continue with the pregnancy and have the baby adopted.

Another way of thinking about your situation is to consider how the statements below make you feel:
• I feel ready to be a parent and bring up a child.
• I don’t want to be pregnant.
• Having a baby will stop me doing the things in my life that are most important to me.
• I do want to have a baby one day but I’d rather wait (because I feel I’m too young, or I’d like to be in a committed relationship).
• I am willing to give up other things in my life in order to bring up a child.
• My family would help me if I have a baby.
• My family wouldn’t approve if I have a baby.
• My partner wants to have a baby with me.
• I couldn’t go through with an abortion.
• I agree with abortion.
• I’m worried this might be my only chance to have a baby.
• I wouldn’t be able to give my baby away.

Whatever you decide it needs to be right for you. The rest of this leaflet gives you some basic information about continuing with the pregnancy, abortion and adoption. This information may also help you make a decision.
trust can help with things such as doing the shopping or looking after the baby, it can be a great support, and enable you to have some time to yourself.

- Your midwife or health visitor can offer advice and support, and put you in touch with local groups where you can meet other new mums or get the support you need.

- Social services at your local authority can assess whether you might need extra support. They may be able to provide services such as nursery or day care, or a support worker who can come to your home.

- Home-Start (Tel: 0800 068 63 68. www.homestart.org.uk). A volunteer may be able to visit you at home to give free practical and emotional help. You can go directly to your local Home-Start or you can be referred by your doctor, practice nurse, midwife, health visitor or social services.

- SureStart (www.surestart.gov.uk) offers help in early education, childcare and family support. SureStart operates differently in England, Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland. See the website or call the Government Public Enquiry Line on 0870 000 2288.

Abortion

Legal abortion is a safe way of ending a pregnancy. This is a decision you may make because you do not want to be pregnant and have a baby at this time.

Who can have an abortion?

Abortion is legal in the UK regardless of your age. How easy it is to arrange an abortion can vary throughout the UK, and it can be very difficult to obtain an abortion in Northern Ireland.

When do I need to make up my mind?

It is important not to delay making your decision. Legal abortion is safer and easier the earlier it is done.

Extra help after the birth

You may be worried that you won’t be able to cope with looking after a baby. Knowing what help might be available may help you make a decision about your pregnancy. Below are some of the ways you may be able to get help.

- Your partner, family and friends. Think about who might be able to help you once the baby is born. If people you in pregnancy. The majority of abortions are carried out before 13 weeks of pregnancy, and most of the rest are carried out before 20 weeks. Abortion after 24 weeks of pregnancy is not common, but is legal in certain circumstances (for example, to save the woman’s life, or if there is substantial risk that if the child were born it would have a serious disability).

It is important to get advice as soon as possible, because it can take up to a month before the abortion is carried out. The abortion may be able to be done sooner if you pay for it. There is no difference in the quality of care you should receive if you choose to pay for an abortion privately or go through the NHS.

Will anyone else be told about my abortion?

Any woman who has an abortion, whatever age she is, has a right for that information to remain confidential. If you have any worries about confidentiality discuss this with the doctor or nurse you speak to about your abortion.

• Your GP does not need to know, although many abortion services like to send a letter to your GP. This should only be done with your permission.

• Your partner, or the father of the child, does not have to know about the abortion, and he has no legal rights to make a decision about whether or not you continue with the pregnancy. Many women do want to discuss the pregnancy with their partner and come to a joint decision, but you can go ahead with an abortion without your partner’s knowledge or agreement.

• If you are under 16 or have learning disabilities, it is possible to have an abortion without telling your parents or carers. The doctors will encourage you to involve your parents or another supportive adult, but if you choose not, you can still have an abortion if the doctors believe that you fully understand what is involved and it is in your best interests.

Confidentiality

All information, advice and services are confidential, but health care professionals are obliged, with your knowledge, to involve social services if they suspect you, or another person, to be at significant risk of harm (for example, sexual, emotional or physical abuse).

What is involved in an abortion?

For some women, deciding whether or not to have an abortion is easier if they know how an abortion is carried out. There are different abortion procedures, and the method used depends on how long you have been pregnant. You can find out more about abortion procedures from:

• fpa (Helpline: 0845 122 8690. www.fpa.org.uk) – the helpline adviser you speak to will be able to talk to you about abortion, and send you fpa’s Abortion leaflet, or you can read about abortion on the website.

• The Royal College of Obstetricians and Gynaecologists (www.rcog.org.uk) – the website has clear information about abortion.

Where can I go if I want an abortion?

Abortion care is available free through the NHS, or through other clinics and hospitals for a fee (the cost will vary).

• You can go to your general practice, local contraception or sexual health service or young people’s service. They can refer you for an abortion through the NHS (to find your nearest service see How do I find out about services? on page 15).

• It can be more difficult to get referred for an abortion in Northern Ireland. Women in Northern Ireland can contact fpa’s unplanned pregnancy service on 028 90 325 488. They will be able to advise you about getting a private abortion in England if that is what you decide to do.
How does adoption take place?

Although you can start preparing for adoption at any time during your pregnancy, the adoption won’t be completed until after the baby is born. You will be asked to sign a formal document agreeing to the adoption, but you cannot be asked to do this until the baby is six weeks old. This agreement does not make the adoption final.

Usually the baby will go to foster carers for a short time while arrangements are made for him or her to move to the adoptive parents. The adoptive parents will then look after the baby, and apply to the court for an adoption order. Once the order is granted, the adoption is final and you will no longer be the baby’s legal parent.

Can I change my mind?

You can change your mind at any stage before the adoption has been made legal but it may not be easy, or even possible, to get your baby back, depending on how far the adoption has progressed. The court will make a decision based on what is best for the baby. Once the adoption has been made legal, the baby will stay with the adoptive parents even if you change your mind.

What do I do if I think I want to have the baby adopted?

Making a decision to have a baby adopted can be very difficult. If you think you might want to continue with the pregnancy and have the baby adopted, you may find it helpful to talk with someone who can tell you more about adoption, including:

- the doctor or nurse at your general practice
- a social worker at your hospital (contact your local hospital to find out whether there is a social worker attached to the maternity unit)
How do I find out about services?

Help and advice is free for women of all ages through the NHS or social services departments.

- You can find out about all clinics from sexual health direct, run by fpa, on 0845 122 8690 or at www.fpa.org.uk. You can also call fpa in Scotland and Northern Ireland (see back cover).

- You can find details of all services including general practices at www.nhsdirect.nhs.uk. In England and Wales you can call NHS Direct on 0845 46 47, in Scotland NHS 24 on 08454 24 24 24.

- You can find details of your local authority at www.direct.gov.uk, or by looking in the phone directory.

- You can also get details of your nearest contraception, genitourinary medicine (GUM) or sexual health clinic from a telephone directory, health centre, local pharmacy, hospital, midwife, health visitor or advice centre.

- You can get details of GUM or sexual health clinics from the Sexual Health Information Line on 0800 567 123 or at www.playingsafely.co.uk.

- You can find details of young people’s services from Brook on 0800 0185 023, or visit www.ruthinking.co.uk, or if you’re under 18 you can call Sexwise on 0800 28 29 30.

Some things to think about

If you are thinking about having the baby adopted, finding out more about the adoption process may help you to work out whether it is a good decision for you. You may want to know answers to these questions:

- Do I have to tell anyone about the adoption, such as the baby’s father or my parents?
- Does the baby’s father have a say in the adoption?
- Will I be able to help choose the adoptive parents?
- Will I be able to have any contact with the child once he or she is adopted, or any say in the way he or she is brought up?
- Can an adoption be undone if I want my baby back later?
- Can I write a letter to the baby explaining why I chose to have him or her adopted?
- Will the baby be able to find me when he or she grows up?

To find out the answers to these and any other questions, you can ask an adoption social worker, the British Association of Adoption and Fostering, or you can look at the adoption section at www.dfes.gov.uk, the Department for Education and Skills’ website.

• an adoption social worker at your local authority’s social services department or at a local voluntary adoption agency (see How do I find out about services? on page 15 or contact the British Association of Adoption and Fostering. Tel: 020 7421 2600. www.baaf.org.uk).

If you are considering adoption, the social worker or adoption agency that is supporting you will arrange special adoption counselling. This is to make sure that you know exactly what the adoption involves, and to explore all possible options with you to help you make the right decision for you.
How fpa can help you

sexual health direct is a nationwide service run by fpa. It provides:

- confidential information and advice on contraception, sexually transmitted infections, planning a pregnancy, pregnancy choices and sexual wellbeing
- details of family planning clinics, sexual health clinics and other sexual health services
- a wide range of leaflets on individual methods of contraception, common sexually transmitted infections, abortion and planning a pregnancy.

fpa helplines

UK
helpline 0845 122 8690
9am to 6pm
Monday to Friday

Northern Ireland
helpline 028 90 325 488
9am to 5pm Monday to Thursday,
9am to 4.30pm Friday

Scotland
helpline 0845 122 8691
9am to 5pm Monday to Thursday,
9am to 4.30pm Friday
or visit fpa’s website
www.fpa.org.uk

A final word

This leaflet can only give you basic information about pregnancy options. The information is based on the evidence and medical opinion available at the time this leaflet was printed. Different people may give you different information and advice on certain points.

Remember: contact your doctor, practice nurse or a contraception clinic if you are worried or unsure about anything.